

Damn Dallas*: New Single Release from the Hutcheson Brothers Now Available

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (July 24, 2025) – Damn Dallas, the latest release from award-winning country music duo and singer-songwriters, the Hutcheson Brothers, comprised of Brandon and Jon Hutcheson, officially released today. The song from the Tennessee-based duo is now available on all streaming music platforms, such as Spotify, Apple Music, and Amazon Music, and through their website.

Damn Dallas is a country-rock, red dirt anthem that captures the raw emotion and restless spirit of lost love and the Lone Star State.

"We wrote this song in January 2023 in a hotel room in Houston, Texas after a show," said the brothers. "We had spent a few days in Dallas, before the Houston show, and the title of 'Damn Dallas' just came up through conversation. After about 15 or 20 minutes of writing, the song was completed."

In late 2024, Jon and Brandon took the song to the award-winning Rosewood Studios in Tyler, Texas to begin the recording process.

"From the time we wrote Damn Dallas to the time we were recording it, we had played multiple shows in Texas and out west. We really like the music scene in Texas and Oklahoma, and that red dirt sound has really grown on us. Damn Dallas was written in Texas, inspired by Texas, and there wasn't any doubt that we wanted to record this song in Texas. This song has a more grittier, darker feel to it than anything we've released previously, but no doubt about it, Damn Dallas is country, and we hope that it is well-liked among our listeners."

Additionally, a music video, directed by R. Alan Ingalls, is scheduled to be released in August.
